SANDY SHILOH PHOTOGRAPHER

Sandy Shiloh has held an interest in photography since childhood, but wasn't involved in nature photography until she retired to the southwest in 2012, where she became inspired by the beauty of the desert and its animal inhabitants.

She resides in the Portal-Rodeo area and enjoys photographing nearly everything in nature, from tiny insects to tall mountains. Her favorite subjects to photograph are animals, birds, landscapes, storms and the night sky. She is particularly passionate about photographing storm cloud structure and wolves.

Sandy's photographs have appeared in magazines and on television, and she has won awards for her storm photography.
